4th International Congress on Construction History

Paris, France, 3-7 July 2012

Welcome

The Écoles nationales supérieures d'architecture Paris-Malaquais, Paris La Villette and Versailles as well as the Conservatoire national des arts et métiers (CNAM) invite you to participate in the 4th International Congress on Construction History. After Madrid (2003), Cambridge (2006) and Cottbus (2009), this event will take place in Paris, from Tuesday 3 July to Saturday 7 July 2012.

By definition, construction history appears as hybrid, associating design to fabrication, the conceptualization phase to the implementation phase. It is thus necessarily interdisciplinary, combining historians and practitioners of all sorts. Construction history is also multifaceted: material, conceptual, patrimonial. With this Fourth International Congress, we are aiming to:

Reunite a large community of scholars and technicians

The objective is to bring together technical approaches to construction history, already well established and dynamic, while developing its social and cultural dimensions. This is why we are calling for the participation of a large community of established practitioners, established scholars and doctoral candidates, whether they be historians of technology, of art, of architecture, of law or of economy...
